ECO CHURCH

Mental Health Awareness Week (May 12-18)

The rise in different forms of 'eco anxiety' should not come as a surprise given we are facing an unprecedented ecological crisis. Concern in the face of this threat is totally understandable but can be deeply debilitating. Facing and sharing our true feelings about something tough, opens the door to addressing the issue in our hearts and minds. Developing a strong mutually supportive relationship between people and the environment is critical if we are to be encouraged to play our part in environmental stewardship fully, and so is keeping our faith in a God whose love is always bigger than our human failures.
